Understanding Investment Banks: A Trading Perspective

by Mr. James WONG

Trader, Fixed-Income Department BNP Paribas Hong Kong

October 11, 2010 (Monday)

6:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

Rayson Huang Theatre (黃麗松講堂), HKU

Abstract:

This educational seminar is geared towards students with potential career interest at investment banks, in particular within the Sales & Trading business. The speaker will share an insider's view, exploring the life of a simple trade and walking through a typical day for a trader. Through practical examples, various roles in investment banks will be touched upon, such as salespeople, risk managers, operations & finance, etc. The speaker expects to, with an open discussion format, discuss the students' interests and possible strategies to pursue relevant career opportunities.

About the speaker:

James is a trader at the Fixed-Income Department at BNP Paribas Hong Kong. He has previously spent 5 years in New York in the fixed income business. James is an alumnus of the Actuarial Science program and has a Master's degree in Financial Engineering at Columbia University.

All interested are welcome
